PUBLIC NOTICE

Hospitals are not usually Safe for Children

Be a good Visitor - Protect Children and the vulnerable from Dangerous Infection

Next to our patients, their family members and friends are the most important people we know

We are glad to have you

Spending time with patients during their hospital stay stimulates smiles and lifts spirits both from the emotional and social perspectives. That is why visitors encouraged are to come, sit, and stay awhile; it is a healthy experience for everyone.

However, (much to our regret) children and vulnerable individuals (the pregnant and elderly) should refrain from visiting the hospital building due to numerous reasons, some of them are;

- The hospital's building is considered to be a contaminated location no matter how clean it is kept..
- Children, pregnant women and the elderly are vulnerable, because of weaknesses in their immune systems, exposure to such contaminated and infected areas and individuals can be harmful.
- Children are not to be left unattended in around the hospital.
 - In special cases, the children can be provided limited access but it is encouraged that they stay in the common areas (lobbies, cafeteria, waiting areas) rather than the patient care areas.
- Wash the children hands immediately after visiting the facility. It may prevent germs from causing infection in children.
- If Children or adults have got a fever, cold, or any infectious symptoms, they should not come to hospital and stay at home..
- Do not bring children candies or snacks to the hospital as we are striving to provide a neat and clean environment for the patients.
- Adult overnight visitors are limited to one per night per adolescent patient.
